BACKGROUND

BACKGROUND

Ottawa has reached a population of one million and is at an important point in its growth.

Ottawa has the opportunity to take the next step to become a world class capital.

However, the City runs the risk of service decline if it is not prepared for future growth.

The City needs to balance existing services with future growth and service needs.

Therefore, the City's strategy must strike the right balance between spending on existing core services and investing for the future.

Existing Services

Future Growth

CONSIDERATIONS: CURRENT SITUATION

- The population of Ottawa is growing and the service needs and expectations of residents are changing.
- There is more competition than ever for economic investment.
- Climate change is impacting the city.
- There is tension between spending to maintain the current situation and investing for future development.
- Without preparation for long-term growth, there is a risk of service outcomes declining for residents.
- Maintaining resident confidence in the City is important for economic investment.
- There is a need for a healthy and engaged workforce to meet the public's growing service needs and expectations.

CONSIDERATIONS:

- Build the City's brand and reputation so to attract talent and investment.
- Ensure the city remains affordable for all residents when setting tax rates.
- Take action to protect the economy, the eco-systems and the community from climate change.
- Be innovative in how services are designed and delivered to residents.
- Balance short-term and long-term investment.
- Strengthen public engagement to understand residents' changing needs and expectations.
- Invest in staff and ensure long-term requirements and leadership needs are met.

LONG-TERM CONSIDERATIONS

The City of Ottawa takes or contributes to strategic actions to achieve priority outcomes in three ways.

- Take actions and lead in achieving the priority outcomes.
  - For each action, the Lead Departments, Standing Committee Oversight and Budget Reference are included.
  - These actions will be considered by the aligned Standing Committee.
- Collaborate directly with other strategic stakeholders to achieve the priority outcomes, but is not the main lead.
- Support and indirectly help others to achieve the priority outcomes.
